Social engagement is when you devote yourself to the community or a group which in my opinion working with other people is really fun because then you can get all your ideas out at the same time

The story of inking boy and his loss for friends;

Once upon a time in a place far far away There was an inking not just any inking he was on a trip to save the world and just like any other day he had nobody to talk to, not even one friend.

While all the other inkings had friends he did not have a single friend, until a few days later after the long battle was finished.....

He saw another inking pull out a nice electric guitar, as he went up to her he was nervous but did not show it but he soon realized she was the perfect friend for him she liked vocaloid songs just like him as he went up to her to ask her to be his friend he blurred out an rhetorical question saying "nice song what language is that in" realizing that he already knew the answer....

As she said her song was in Japanese She asked him if he wanted to be her friend. Inking boy was really really nervous but he took a deep breath and carried on and said, "SURE!!!"
